Your Eyes and Your Fingers Do Not Have to Be Your Guides

when buying here.

We are simple enough to believe that we fare best when we guard your interests of quality and price.

It conduces immensely to the content and pleasure of shopping to know that there is a place in this city where one who is not a judge of goods, or one not much accustomed to shopping, is sure to not be taken advantage of in price or cajoled by super-salesmanship into buying what they do not need.

We would rather not make a sale than make one for the buyer to regret.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Vegetable Souffle.

Have ready about four ounces of any vegetable puree (spinach, cabbage, carrot, sprouts, turnip, artichoke, tomato or celery, or several mixed), the puree should be rather dry—that is to say, not sloppy). Then put into pan one gill of water and one ounce of butter and a pinch of salt. Stir, and when it boils sprinkle in about one ounce of flour and stir briskly and cook until you have a paste. Add the puree and stir until mixed. Add the yolks of two eggs one at a time, then a whole egg and then the frothed whites of two eggs. Bake in a greased souffle dish half full for ten minutes in a hot oven. This souffle rises very much and must be served the minute it is ready. The souffle can be varied. For example, the remains of a dish of vegetable curry served and with some of the left-over rice added makes an excellent souffle.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Law and son spent Sunday with relatives at Salem.

MAKES CHECK GOOD.

Sherman Deems, the young man who was jailed Saturday night under a charge of giving a bad check for $5 to Willis Cutlip, proprietor of a pool room, satisfied the check and the costs of the case Monday in Magistrate R. Edward Kidd's court and was released.

UNOFFICIAL NEUTRALS VISIT BIG WAR PRISON

In England Where Officers of the German Army Are in Custody.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Next to Downing Hall, Holyport is the most important German officers' prison in England and for the first time the authorities have permitted unofficial neutrals to visit the camp.

Most of the prisoners have their quarters in the large building of the Holyport army preparatory school, but with an increase in their numbers it has been necessary to supplement this with temporary wooden structures built in the school yard. The chief school building was erected by Charles II as a residence for his favorite, Neilant German officers' prison in England and for the first time the authorities have permitted unofficial neutrals to visit the camp.

Big Athletic Field.

When the party of neutral correspondents arrived to inspect the camp the prisoners were preparing to leave the house for the eighteen-acre athletic field. Twice weekly the prisoners are compelled to seek this field where they take whatever form of exercise they desire. Every day the prisoners have the privilege of using the field for two and one half hours, but the half hour period twice weekly is compulsory. In the summer the tennis courts were in almost constant use, but this form of sport at which the Germans were particularly keen, has now ceased on account of the weather. Football and hockey are now played with the officers' prison orderlies taking a lively interest in the first named game at which they have become quite adept.

A few minutes before the arrival of the recreation hour an armed patrol is stationed about the wire fence which encloses the field. The officers then stroll from the house in groups through the main gate of the prison and down a lane between a row of sentries to the field. Later their orderlies appear under escort of an armed guard. The groups that reach the field remain intact, and according to the British officers in charge, this same grouping takes place within the prison. Differences of rank and social position are sharply accentuated and only broken down in the event of a general celebration of some sort. Among the prisoners is a number of navy officers and cleavage between the army and navy is particularly apparent in the relations of the officers.

Brilliant Garrison Uniforms.

The visit to the camp was made on a wintry afternoon when the vivid and picturesque uniforms of the officers gave touch of color to the dismal surroundings. The presence among the officers of so many brilliant garrison uniforms is accounted for by the fact that whenever a German reserve officer was seized from a ship enroute to Germany, he was permitted to send home for his uniform. The officers actually captured in action wear the usual German field grey uniform while the naval officers, most of whom were captured at the battle of the Falkland Islands, wear blue uniforms which differ little in appearance from those of their captors.

While the officers were in the recreation ground the visitors were conducted through their quarters. The bathing department is well equipped with bath tubs from the school, which while hardly man's size are plentifully equipped with hot water. During the summer the officers had the use of the school swimming tank, but as there is no means of heating the water, the winter has compelled them to give up this pleasure.

Lounging Rooms.

The ground floor of the house contains several large rooms used as smoking and lounging rooms by the smokers but these are seldom occupied, as the prisoners seem to prefer the small sitting rooms, which they have partitioned off from their bedrooms by the use of screens. The second and third floors are given up to bed rooms in which from one to six officers sleep. Besides the open grate heaped with coal each room has one or more coal oil stoves and with every window closed these rooms seemed stifling to the visitors who had become accustomed to the inadequate heating of English houses. The bedrooms are furnished with very comfortable cots, each of which is covered with a clean bedspread. Some of the naval prisoners have equipped their rooms like the state-rooms of a warship with one bunk above another. Most of the rooms are ornamented with attractive prints many of which are the handicraft of the prisoners. Some of the prisoners have improved the dull wall paper by using their bright colored bedspreads as tapestry wall covering. Among the prints are many pictures of German national figures, the most popular being Emperor William, Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Admiral von Spee, commander of the German fleet at the Falkland Islands' engagement.
